

A photograph of two greylags on a calm pond. One greylag is in the foreground, facing right, with its wings partially spread. The other greylag is slightly behind and to the left, also facing right. Both birds have grey bodies, white heads and necks, and black caps. Their reflections are clearly visible in the still water.